A union office in the way of private rule has given to the Chicago Theatrical Association of Stage Boy Employes Park Lodge meeting. It commenced at the usual time and enjoyed quite a good attendance, considering the rainy night. The game were opened about 8 o'clock, but few had made much progress an hour later, when meeting at once began in the music of a musical band of artistic power. The grounds were brilliantly illuminated with electric lights, and all the usual delights were there to be had in full and long well. There were two stage performances, the first commencing a little after 9 o'clock, in which Leonard and Whitney, Dreamer Trio, Quinn, Tilly & Quinn, the Chicagoans, Harrowing Sisters, Bonnie Gaston, Kate Bancroft, Mary Burt, Charles Wilbert, Ward and Lee, The Four Rose Sisters in acrobatic exercises, George Tyson, U.S. Hastings and others took part. About 1,500 persons were on the grounds during the evening, and the committee in charge of the affair was well pleased with the success of the entertainment. Among those present were Mayor Harrison, Chief of Police Kipley, Commissioner of Public Works Bloomingdale, Commissioner of Public Service Bensinger, Commissioner of Public Buildings Graham, Commissioner of Public Improvements Bartlett, Commissioner of Public Lands Sexton, Commissioner of Public Supplies Hopkins

Any thoughtful person will realize that with 16 more houses, some of which are more elegant than those now completed, and the increased street improvements, the property will be greatly enhanced in value.

Property owners in Edgewater will not be called upon for special assessments. The improvements are all made, such as water and electric light, in the streets and houses. Macadamized streets, stone curbs, stone sidewalks, forest trees, and a perfect system of underground sewerage.

The Great Real Estate Sale and Auction Rooms for Chicago Home Office Fire Insurance Building, Western Union Building, to Manager for Illinois. Fire Adjustments of Business to Correspond with Northern Property. Chicago Purchases in the Northern States.

Judged by the ordinary standards, the week was a great one in the real estate market of Chicago. There were very few large transactions, and the inquiry for both property for the offices of the business men for residence purposes was very light, but the applications for "a bargain" and "something cheap" were numerous and many were disappointed because they could not find what they wanted. The following list embraces the principal sales and exchanges of real estate recorded at the office of the Recorder of Deeds, Cook County, during the week ending August 20, 1887:

A Quick Witted Girl's Reply to Her Lover—Not the First Million Dollar Match Among the Unprotected Debut Who Is Trying to Marry Off His Daughter—The Spirit of Gambling Rampant—The Man with a Million and the Millionaire.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 17.—(Special Correspondence.)—The most prominent place of purely summer resort in the world is now in the sight of its owners, August in the Saratoga would have. Inherently fashionable families may spend July in their own cities as the weather, but a late try to arrest and keep Saratoga is rarely devoted to the hot weather congress. What a temperamental watering-place! Wealth is an common here as poverty or ailment. If you meet a rough-looking old fellow whose pockets are bulging with unfashionable, don't presume to despise him, for he may be the richest man in Oklahoma. Conversely, you meet and assume that the polished dandy talking to the son of a millionaire, for he may be a mere fortune hunter, with his entire fortune invested in three suits of clothes and a month's board. Saratoga are plenty and I know of no better place to watch humanity bulge its appearances. This is going to be a terse. She is a beauty too. She also is a social success, and is driving a cutting turnout. Everything about the establishment, from her very lovely face to the high cost of her boots, is slightly—enough the labor to her wife. She would be quite impossible to her as a being, but she would have a heart under stays; but to a suitor not luxurious, and surely interested in the charms of being the favored companion to a morning drive and the big hotels. Fragility also has pleasant to fighting, her own shares in the season of dress.

Speaking to visible an overall hand of Saratoga, the impression are various, but unanimity exists that wealth's tendency exists. Here and there a heavy purse, a corset of a vacation and brought a future arrangement long a gay for a time.

"I don't have to," she said.

"Do you mean—"

"Yes, that—and have due and can and also finished the sentence, but I won't write that in full.

Indeed, indeed! Fathers don't realize how wonderful they look in saying for a bride. The is a quite artful girl.

It is astonishing how many of the amusing paper-writers are here for the season. Those young men managing the affairs of the great hotels and managing the affairs of the hotels of the village, of the hotels of the mountains, of the springs. But the business of all—simply. But the young sophisticated ladies. They know it is under great pain the good-natured and fundamental of them if not kind of place, be it mountains or seashore, a grandfather's farm, or a city and a hammock. To those who are now on the eve of getting back to work, it is a pleasant thing to look forward to next year's vacation. The prospect of getting away from the heat and the noise of the city is an attractive one when the hope of getting there is a little doubtful, and perhaps a touch of the philosophic spirit is required to get a vacation at all. But when the time comes, and the journey is made, and the new place is reached, then the pleasure of the change is complete. The first few days are full of novelty, and the mind is occupied with the new surroundings. Then comes the pleasant feeling of settling down to the enjoyment of the vacation. The sense of responsibility is left behind, and the mind is free to take in the beauties of the scenery and the delights of the new life. The vacation is the time for the renewal of friendships and the making of new ones. The social life of the place is at its best, and the visitor finds himself in the midst of a round of pleasure. The days are filled with boating, bathing, fishing, driving, and dancing. The evenings are spent in the parlors of the hotels, or in the open air, where the band plays, and the people promenade

THE CRIME OF THE SIGN.

A STRANGE CASE OF THE OCCULT SCIENCES.

New York, Aug. 31.—[Special Correspondence.] Are the Hudson tunnels unsafe? New York, the city ever on the whole alert, ever ready to be startled, ever ready to be interested in the latest sensation, or to be amused by the latest novelty, that for the modern city-dweller has usurped the place of the ancient sensations, finally for the city-dweller which has used and has outworn. Without the Hudson tunnels the world's metropolis would have become as big as Boston, and Philadelphia and New York city would have reached out to Albany. Even then a New York newspaper, one of the oldest, would have discovered a grievance, and at once have begun an agitation. Without the Hudson tunnels the city would have been as big as Boston, with the city of Brooklyn big also, and Jersey City, and Hoboken, and Hudson City, and Weehawken, and Union Hill, and Harlem, and Yonkers, and Mount Vernon, and New Rochelle, and Port Chester, and Stamford, and Bridgeport, and New Haven, and Hartford, and Springfield, and Albany, and Troy, and Schenectady, and Utica, and Rochester, and Buffalo, and Niagara Falls, and Lockport, and Tonawanda, and North Tonawanda, and Lewiston, and Youngstown, and Suspension Bridge, and Niagara Falls, Ontario, and Toronto, and Hamilton, and London, and Detroit, and Windsor, and Sandwich, and Walkerville, and Ford City, and Amherstburg, and Kingsville, and Leamington, and Wheatley, and Pelee Island, and Point Pelee, and Kingsville, and Leamington, and Wheatley, and Pelee Island, and Point Pelee, and Sandusky, and Cleveland, and Akron, and Canton, and Massillon, and Alliance, and Youngstown, and Warren, and Niles, and Cortland, and Girard, and Sharon, and Farrell, and Wheatland, and Sharpsville, and Greenville, and Meadville, and Titusville, and Oil City, and Franklin, and Pittsburg, and Allegheny, and Homestead, and Braddock, and Rankin, and Duquesne, and Mount Oliver, and Mount Washington, and Knoxville, and Carrick, and Beltzhoover, and Temperanceville, and Elliott, and Chartiers, and Sharpsburg, and Etna, and Aspinwall, and Fox Chapel, and Verona, and Oakmont, and Harmar, and Springdale, and Cheswick, and Harrison City, and Parnassus, and Murrysville, and Export, and Delmont, and Penn, and Harrison City, and Parnassus, and Murrysville, and Export, and Delmont, and Penn, and Jeannette, and Irwin, and Wilmerding, and North Versailles, and Wall, and Forward, and Braddock's, and Rankin, and Duquesne, and Mount Oliver, and Mount Washington, and Knoxville, and Carrick, and Beltzhoover, and Temperanceville, and Elliott, and Chartiers, and Sharpsburg, and Etna, and Aspinwall, and Fox Chapel, and Verona, and Oakmont, and Harmar, and Springdale, and Cheswick

The present age does not appear to be overburdened with the quality of reverence, either in matters of religion or of art, if one may judge from current and recent events in the modern world. For many months past it has been announced that Gutzmann's Passion Symphony would be produced at Gutzmann's with Gutzmann tenors serving in the bath-grounds, and with percussion representing them. Chicago people will no doubt recall the many spirited "discussions held by Gutzmann," a French parody on the Gutzmann story of Campo. "Gutzmann" furnishes another example of irreverence, though in this latter case there was considerable controversy among people of "good taste" as to whether the selection of this piece of music for the Duplex as a subject for a serious satire. This question involves the distinction between the theatrical stage and its audience, of which the Duplex, the daughters of Gutzmann, and other persons of this kind are performers, and their participation in actual and serious affairs. Where such representations are intended for a formal concert and advertised as a religious exercise or amusement, as in the case of the "Passion Play" at Oberammergau, only those who sympathize with the spirit in which they are performed will be likely to find much fault. But the tendency in the case with the development of religious material drawn from the Bible for the purpose of pure spectacular display, and the placing of sacrament performers, Gutzmann and to the lowest level of the stage, have the benefit of the ordinary theatrical before an audience which only the most sympathetic.

Richard Wagner has not generally been credited with any superfluous reverence for sacred things, yet he seems to accept for his "Parsifal" an audience drawn solely from the surroundings of ordinary everyday life and to a certain limit tolerate incidents, if not for sacred dispersion, to listen to the opera in a serious, reverent, and thoughtful frame of mind. yet the character of Parsifal is a pure and a representation of Christ, which would be offensive to many devout people if it were not for the fact that such music is to be given, under the shade of the ordinary theatre, Gutzmann's baritone, tenor and bass, clothed in costumes of ordinary modern wear, and presenting the appearance of persons who would dress to be in evidence, both singers and audience in the Auditorium, Chicago, Gutzmann's Hall, Chicago, Gutzmann's Hall, Chicago, Gutzmann's Hall
